

Contraindications

- The use of PolyPhil hair is contraindicated in individuals with a known hypersensitivity to any of the product's ingredients or with a positive history of allergy to fish products.
- As there are no available clinical data on the use of the product in patients with autoimmune diseases, pregnant or breastfeeding women, or individuals under 18 years of age, treatment with PolyPhil hair is not recommended in these cases.

Precautions

- Not suitable for injections other than intradermal.
- The product is intended for single use only. Do not re-sterilize. After use, dispose of the product according to accepted medical practices and applicable regulations.

Side Effects

- The mechanical action of the needle may cause small bruises.
- In rare cases, reactions common to all types of injections may occur in the treated area, such as swelling, redness, and a sensation of heat or pain.
- To accelerate healing, a cold compress may be applied to the treated area.
- These reactions usually resolve within a few days. If symptoms persist, consult a physician.
- The physician should ensure that patients report any adverse reactions occurring after treatment.
